Experiences of urban and suburban police officers encountering mental illness in their communities: training, attitudes and actions

Sophie Madeline Ricks

Smith College

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarworks.smith.edu/theses

Part of the Social and Behavioral Sciences Commons

Recommended Citation
Ricks, Sophie Madeline, "Experiences of urban and suburban police officers encountering mental illness in their communities: training, attitudes and actions" (2010). Masters Thesis, Smith College, Northampton, MA.
https://scholarworks.smith.edu/theses/1174

This Masters Thesis has been accepted for inclusion in Theses, Dissertations, and Projects by an authorized administrator of Smith ScholarWorks. For more information, please contact scholarworks@smith.edu.
ABSTRACT

This study was designed to explore the experiences of urban and suburban police officers who encounter persons with mental illness in their communities. The focus was on the issues of training, attitudes, and action when responding to calls involving the mentally ill. Specifically, this project targeted the experiences of police officers with at least one year on the force. Police officers came from two police departments in two different neighborhoods.

Interviews were completed with 12 police officers of different backgrounds. Officers answered twenty-one Likert scale type questions addressing their experiences with the mentally ill and mental health agencies, in addition to three open-ended questions about challenges they face, changes they believe would improve outcomes for the mentally ill and incidents they’d faced with PwMI.

The findings of the study showed that participants were able identify a broad range of obstacles to their work with PwMI and offer many useful suggestions for how to improve collaboration with local mental health professionals. Of further significance, while officers expressed frustration with the situations involving PwMI, their attitudes and beliefs about the mentally ill in general were quite positive.
EXPERIENCES OF URBAN AND SUBURBAN POLICE OFFICERS ENCOUNTERING MENTAL ILLNESS IN THEIR COMMUNITIES: TRAINING, ATTITUDES AND ACTIONS

A project based upon an independent investigation, submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Social Work.

Sophie Ricks
Smith College School for Social Work
2009
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This thesis could not have been accomplished without the assistance of many people whose contributions are gratefully acknowledged.

I wish to thank in particular my research advisor, Dr. Jean LaTerz, for her encouragement, patience and support.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS ................................................................................................. ii
TABLE OF CONTENTS .............................................................................................. iii

CHAPTER

I.  INTRODUCTION ............................................................................................. 1

II.  LITERATURE REVIEW ................................................................................ 5

III. METHODOLOGY ............................................................................................ 17

IV. FINDINGS ....................................................................................................... 24

V.  DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS ............................................................. 52

REFERENCES ....................................................................................................... 65

APPENDICES

Appendix A:  Referral Guide for Police Officers ................................................. 66
Appendix B:  Informed Consent Form ................................................................. 67
Appendix C:  Human Subjects Review Approval Letter .................................... 69
Appendix D:  Interview Guide ........................................................................... 70
Appendix E:  Transcriber’s Assurance of Research Confidentiality ................. 73
Appendix F:  Police Proposal Letter ................................................................. 74